[Methodology: Spelling, punctuation and/or grammar have been corrected in some instances for ease of reading and to facilitate searches of the database. Where the meaning is not compromised by adhering to the spelling, punctuation or grammar, no change has been made. Corrections or additional notes have been inserted within brackets or footnotes. Blanks appearing in the transcripts reflect blanks in the original. A bracketed question mark indicates that the word or words preceding it represent(s) a guess by me. Only materials pertinent to the military service of the veteran and to contemporary events have been transcribed. Affidavits that provide additional information on these events are included and genealogical information is abstracted, while standard, 'boilerplate' affidavits and attestations related solely to the application, and later nineteenth and twentieth century research requests for information have been omitted. I use speech recognition software to make all my transcriptions. Such software misinterprets my southern accent with unfortunate regularity and my poor proofreading fails to catch all misinterpretations. Also, dates or numbers which the software treats as numerals rather than words are not corrected: for example, the software transcribes "the eighth of June one thousand eighty six" as "the 8th of June 1786." Please call errors or omissions to my attention.]

South Carolina as necessity seemed to require. A Tory Captain by the name of John Fanning² and his company were doing much mischief about this time in that section of Country and the object was to notice their movements and destroyed them if possible. He finally marched to Salisbury and from thence to Hillsboro where he was at the time the battle was fought at Camden. His nine months expired and he was discharged at Hillsboro and again returned home. Where after remaining a few days he enlisted during the War, under Captain Richard Hopkins who was a recruiting officer, he marched under command of said Hopkins to a point between Harrisburg Old Court house and Roanoke River, where he was placed under the command of Edward Williams as well as he can remember. Having been out four weeks having reached the residence of __ Wilson Esquire on the North side of Roanoke River news reached the troops of the surrender of Cornwallis and they were discharged and once more returned home. His father then moved to the Western part of Virginia to what was then called Elk garden where after having been out of the service of his Country about eighteen months he volunteered for three months. The object of this expedition was to go against the Indians. His Captain was Charles Hays – Charles Price was his Lieutenant. He marched to Robinson's Stationed – thence down to Blackmore's Station on Clinch River – thence to Martin's Stationed in Powel's Valley where his three months having expired he was discharged. His Colonel was John Cowan – General Andrew Cowan his Captain's brother was with the troops. Shortly thereafter he again volunteered for three months under the same officers last mentioned. He marched from Elk Garden to the Block house on the waters of Clinch River – thence to the long Islands of Holston [River], he was here stationed and served out his three months and was discharged – He remained at home a few weeks on his return and again volunteered for three months under the same officers again, and again marched to the places mentioned in his last tour and also to Washington Court house now Addington [Abingdon?] where his three months expired and he was discharged. Having served in all two years and four months. During his three tours last mentioned declarant had several rencounters with the Indians at Blackmore's Station – at Martin's Station, at the mouth of Bull Run on Sandy River and at the foot of Black mountain on Cumberland River. At the latter place the Indians took us by surprise and killed five of declarant's mess as they lay by his side. Declarant and the troops with him killed seventeen of the Indians and took the eighteenth and only one left prisoner. He was in no battle during his four first tours. He respectfully asks such pension as the above and foregoing services may entitle him to. He has no documentary evidence nor does he know of any person, whose testimony he can procure who can testify as to his service. He hereby relinquishes every claim to a pension or annuity except the present and declares that his name is not on the pension roll of any agency in any State.
