[Methodology: Spelling, punctuation and/or grammar have been corrected in some instances for ease of reading and to facilitate searches of the database. Where the meaning is not compromised by adhering to the spelling, punctuation or grammar, no change has been made. Corrections or additional notes have been inserted within brackets or footnotes. Blanks appearing in the transcripts reflect blanks in the original. A bracketed question mark indicates that the word or words preceding it represent(s) a guess by me. The word 'illegible' or 'indecipherable' or 'undeciphered' appearing in brackets indicates that at the time I made the transcription, I was unable to decipher the word or phrase in question. Only materials pertinent to the military service of the veteran and to contemporary events have been transcribed. Affidavits that provide additional information on these events are included and genealogical information is abstracted, while standard, 'boilerplate' affidavits and attestations related solely to the application, and later nineteenth and twentieth century research requests for information have been omitted. I use speech recognition software to make all my transcriptions. Such software misinterprets my southern accent with unfortunate regularity and my poor proofreading skills fail to catch all misinterpretations. Also, dates or numbers which the software treats as numerals rather than words are not corrected: for example, the software transcribes "the eighth of June one thousand eighty six" as "the 8th of June 1786." Please call material errors or omissions to my attention. Researchers should not rely solely on the transcripts but should review the originals for themselves. The State of South Carolina [Marion District]

On this the Sixteenth day of October Anno Domini 1833 personally appeared in open Court Loftis R. Munnerlyn, before me, Richard Gantt, one of the Circuit Judges of the said State and Presiding Judge in the Court of Common Pleas in and for the District of Marion and State aforesaid who being duly sworn maketh oath to the following Declaration in order to obtain the benefit of the Act of Congress passed on the Seventh June, 1832.--that he was born in the District and State aforesaid and is now and ever has been a citizen resident in the same District and State—that he was born on the thirteenth day of July, 1753 and was Eighty years old last July. When the Militia was drafted into three Classes for the purpose of being called into service he was drafted in the first but by whose order he is unable to state—some time in the Spring of that year he was marched off under the command of Capt. Jacob Buckholts and at Lynches Creek his company were joined by Capt. DuBose [Daniel DuBose's] company from Darlington District—they were marched to See-wee Bay [sic, Sewee Bay] to prevent the landing of the British who were hovering on the coast—He remained there two months when he was discharged and returned home—the detachment was commanded by Major Thornly [sic, probably Robert Thornley] and it was shortly before the attack upon Fort Moultrie near Charleston [June 28, 1776]. He remained at home two months when he was again ordered to march to Charleston and did so under the command of Capt. James Munnerlyn (his Brother) Majr. Thornley and Col. Leml. Benton [Lemuel Benton]. Upon reaching Haddrills Point [sic, Haddrell Point] Col. Benton returned home and declarant was stationed in Charleston two months performing principally guard duty—at the expiration of that time he was discharged and returned home where he remained two months when he was again drafted and marched to Lynches Causeway under the command of Capt. Jno. Munnerlyn [John Munnerlyn]- Thornley was his Major—Benton his Colonel and the whole under the command of General McIntosh [Alexander McIntosh] and the troops were at Lynches Causeway when Charleston was taken by the British [Charleston South Carolina fell to the British on May 12, 1780] —he had been at that place one month when Charleston was taken by the British—they were then ordered to march in the direction of Camden to form a junction with Gates' [Horatio Gates'] Army—a great many soldiers deserted on the march and some discharged which reduced the detachment from 600 to about 60 and at the time of Gates' defeat [Battle of Camden, August 15-16, 1780] he was of the few who were faithful and was in hearing of the firing. On the day after the battle Genl. McIntosh having learnt the result of the engagement discharged his men. He returned home. Many of the Militia had to march off to No. Carolina but he did not go but remained lying out in the swamps and woods in Marion District. Some time after his return hearing that Francis Marion was raising a party, he with his four brothers and three others joined Marion and were among the first who assisted in forming "Marion's Brigade" at the time he joined Genl. Marion he was commanded by his Brother John Munnerlyn Thornley for Major and John Ervin was the Colonel [sic, Lt. Col.] he remained with Marion for about Nine months when he returned home on furlough but did not remain at home more than one or two hours when he returned to camp. His family lived in midst of Tories and he was safest in camp—his father's house was unroofed [?] by the Tories and Genl. Marion sent a group of thirty men who removed Declarant's father and mother who were aged in the vicinity of a redoubt which is situated on the left right bank of the Pee Dee river opposite Snows Island—from the time of the formation of Marion's Brigade to the time he was discharged and the Brigade disbanded he was continually in the service with Marion as a private soldier and never absent from duty, except for short periods when on furlough which were rarely asked for or desired, the camp being the only place of safety. During the time the Declarant was with Marion he was in the following engagements and skirmishes, Viz: The first was with the Tories at Blue Savannah [September 4, 1780] in Marion District the Tories were commanded by Capts. Right Wall [Wright Wall] and Benj. Lewis [Benjamin Lewis] and Major Micajah Gainey in which the Tories were entirely defeated and routed. The second was with the Tories in the fork of Black river [Tearcoat Swamp? October 25, 1780] declarant's Regiment was then commanded by Col. John Boucher[?] [sic, probably Lt. Col. John Baptiste Bourquin], the third was with the British at Smith's bridge below Quimby [Quinby's Bridge, July 17, 1781] and declarant's party was commanded by Colonels Richardson [Richard Richardson] and Screven [probably a mistaken attempt to name Lt. Col. Alexander Swinton], a part of Lee's [Henry "Light Horse Harry" Lee] Cavalry and a part of Mayhew's [Hezekiah Maham's] were of the party and they were commanded by Major Giles.² The fourth was the attack and capture of the Fort at Monks Corner [Monck's Corner]³ a small detachment from Marion's Brigade of which declarant was one, was commanded by Majr Giles. The fifth was an engagement with the British at Coosahatchie bridge [Coosawhatchie Bridge] in which the Americans were compelled to retreat. The sixth was the attack and capture of Fort Defiance on the Congaree river in the night time. The seventh engagement was with the British at Eutaw Springs [September 8, 1781]. The declarant further states that during the war he was commanded by Captains—James and John Munnerlyn, John Rogers, DuBose, & Black⁴—Majors Thornley, Richard Green, Jno James & Hugh Horry—Colonels Benton [Lt. Col. Lemuel Benton], Ervin, Screven, Richardson, Swinton [probably Alexander Swinton], Baxter [probably Jacob Baxter] and Peter Horry but declarant is unable to state with anything like certainty the particular times he was commanded by these Services or the years in which these services—that the declarant is without Education can neither read or write and that he from old age and consequent loss of memory is unable to state more particularly than he has done. The Declarant states positively and unequivocally that he was in actual service more than three years during the American Revolutionary War. The Declarant further states that he does not know that any of the soldiers who served with him in Marion's Brigade are now alive and whose attendance can be procured to attend but John Booth.⁵ He hereby relinquishes any claim whatsoever to a pension or annuity, except the present and declares that his name is not on the pension roll of the agency of any State whatsoever.

The State of South Carolina

John Booth appeared before me Richard Gantt at the same time above stated and being duly sworn says that he was acquainted with Loftis R. Munnerlyn above, and knows that he joined Marion's Brigade as he has stated above at the formation of that Brigade – that he continued together with Marion for at the least three years when the Deponent enlisted into the regular Service – that he was with Munnerlyn in the engagement with the Tories at Black Mingo & fork of Black River – at Quinby's bridge – at Coosawhatchie bridge-- Fort Defiance on the Congaree and at Eutaw Springs – but was absent from Camp at the Blue Savannah and at Moncks Corner—that the said Loftis R. Munnerlyn was a faithful Soldier – that he knows the fact that his family consisting of four Brothers and himself were staunch Whigs – Deponent states that he enlisted into the regular Service and left Marion's Brigade – that he is now on the pension list of the United States & that he has never heard the patriotism of the said Munnerlyn doubted or denied and that deponent verily believes him to be of the age he represents himself to be.

South Carolina, Marion District}

On this the 28th day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty seven before the Honorable Josiah J. Evans, one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas and Session in and for the Said State, personally appeared Loftis R. Munnerlyn in open Court who upon oath made the following declaration in order to obtain a Pension under the act of Congress passed the 7th day of June in the year of our Lord Eighteen hundred and thirty two viz: That he has no record of his age, that it was recorded in a large Bible in his father's house but that during the war the Tories robbed his father's house and took every thing pretty well off, the Bible amongst the rest when they even ripped the bed open and let out the feathers and carried away the ticks, that he can give no correct and certain statement as to the date of his birth but thinks he is eighty six years old. That he was born in this Marion District in said State where he has always lived up to this time, That the first service he rendered in the Revolutionary War was to volunteer for one month, and served at SeeWee Bay [sic, Sewee Bay] near Charleston under one Captain Thornwell [sic, Robert Thornley?] he does not certainly recollect any other company officers but believes one DuBose was an under officer that Major James was there, that at the time he so volunteered he was not quite sixteen years old, That not long after he returned from Sewee Bay he was drafted for two months and served that time principally at Haddrell's Point, sometimes at Cane-hip [?]⁶ and other places in the neck. That the Captain of his company was John Munnerlyn the brother of the applicant, That one Windham [?] was a Major then, that he cannot now recollect any other officers That not long after he returned from Haddrell's Point he was drafted again for two months and served that time mostly in Charleston. The he cannot recollect any company officer certainly but thinks Daniel Dubose was Captain. That they were put under a Major in Town whose name he does not recollect. That at or about the expiration of the said two months he and others continued for two months longer without any draft and were marched out under one Col Ben_ to Lynches Causeway between the two Santees that there was apprehension that the town would be besieged and that they could not get out. That when they arrived at Lynch's Causeway he was put under Col. Baxter and General McIntosh. That when the British took the Town he was marched toward Camden and arrived within eight miles but before they got farther they learned that the British had possession of the Town and had fought Gates and defeated his troops, that he heard the cannon at the Battle of Camden and when his commanding officer heard of Gates' defeat they discharged their forces and told them that every man would have to shift for himself; That he was in the service as last aforesaid four months in all. That after he returned home General Marion undertook [to] from raise a parcel of men to try to prevent the British from scattering out from Charleston and doing mischief about the country. That he volunteered his services and went with Marion, that the first engagement he was in with Marion was at Blue Savannah near where this deponent lives against the Tories. It was a small engagement in which but one Tory was killed named Matthew Allen. That a few days before the said engagement the Tories had taken this deponents father and had him prisoner, that upon hearing where they were embodied and had his father, himself and four brothers went to General Marion and told him and desired him to assist them in getting their father, that Marion replied he had but sixty men and that there was said to be about five hundred Tories. That upon himself and his brothers expressing a determination to get their father Marion said he would go with them with what men he had. That upon arriving at said Blue Savannah about day break the Tories were sitting and lying around their fires, that the said Matthew Allen was sitting at the fire smoking a pipe when Marion's men fired on them and he got shot. The Tories then dispersed and broke into the swamp. That Marion then on the same day marched his men and this deponent with them about three miles to McFadden's old field where there was a body of Tories stationed commanded by one Capt. Ben Lewis and Major Gainey and attacked them in the day time, fell upon them and dispersed them, killed none but wounded several. That the first engagement the deponent's father was recovered when the Tories were fired upon (he) ran to Marion's company. Thereafter that he stayed with Marion constantly being afraid to go home if he were so disposed for he knew that the Tories would kill him. That he was with Marion at the retaking of Georgetown [28 May 1781]. That Marion accomplished that as follows: The day before he had cart wheels on which he mounted peeled pine logs with the ends blackened so as to resemble cannon, threw up an entrenchment on the out side of Town by the aid of plantation Negroes (amongst whom was a yellow fellow who was said to have furnished cattle and provisions to the British, upon which Marion had him hung). That upon the British discovering the embankment & log cannon they took a fright supposing it to be large cannon and fled from the Town, that General Marion then sent this deponent as the commander of a detachment of men to take possession of their fort which he did & guarded where they found several barrels of English peas & rice poured out of the barrels & left also a good deal of meat, that the British went aboard of their vessels & sailed off down toward the Islands & remained there some time. That from there he went under Marion & was with him in taking a fort made by the British called Rebel's defiance. That afterwards he went under Marion and was with him in taking Moncks Corner and returned back on Santee, back to Snows Island, from there he went on to near about George Town, kept a guard about there but could not do any thing. He was in the following battles at the battle at Coosawhatchie Bridge under the command of James Munnerlyn [and] of John Munnerlyn who were Captains in the service under Gen. Marion, but he was changed about so often that he cannot now recollect with certainty in which of the two companies he was at time.

He was in the Battle at Smith's Bridge commanded by Major Giles – here the Americans were defeated, Company dispersed, deponent thrown from his horse and injured and was taken prisoner. He did not remain long a prisoner but upon the first opportunity mounted his horse and made his escape the enemy firing upon him as long as he was within gun shot. Had a brush with the British at a place called Chooby-finney where some of the British were killed, the Americans had to retreat finding the enemy had received a reinforcement. He was engaged in a fight with the Tories in the fork of Black River where they had a Big dinner cooked, here we took them on surprise, they were hooping and hollowing and were saying they wished they knew where Marion was they'd make a riddle of his hide; we made them fly and took their dinner from them, with guns, saddles and bridles, some of them run in the river and got drowned. He was at this time under the command of John Rogers as his Captain. He was then in a battle at Quimbee Bridge [Quinby's Bridge] with the British under Capt. John Munnerlyn in Genl. Marion's command, here they were too hard for us, the Americans being but a small party. He was a serjeant about a year under Marion's Command, and about the same length of time he was a Commissary. He had discharges at sundry times, but in a great gale or storm in the year 1822 his trunk was blown away with all his papers. He has no documentary evidence of his services and does not recollect the names of any other officers beside those which he has mentioned. He has lived in Marion District from his birth to the present time and he is now unable to work for himself. He hereby releases all claim to any pension from the United States Government except the present and declares that his name is not on the Pension Roll of any agency of any State.
